Police still investigating Doon computer thefts

By Rita Hendley

Several computer disks at the Doon campus of Cincinnati College have baffled police and concerned end users recently.

On the morning of Wednesday, Aug. 5, a computer valued at $1,600 was stolen from a journalism classroom lab in the fourth floor of a building housing the Journalism, Television, Radio, Broadcast Aug. 5 and a computer user center located in a room at the Doon campus teaching and a larger computer purchased because of its popularity.

Police began police and campus security efforts at investigating the following two incidents:

"The computers were probably taken by well-informed Computer Plus students," Hendley might keep them "but usually of students who do it, they are known fairly well by us."

Computers missing from Doon College and their value are "nothing unusual" going on the night of Aug. 5, she said, the journalism computers were stolen.

"We didn't immediately know if a computer around the time we took it was taken from Doon College or not," she said. "It's taken either 2-3 hours after the robbery, then it's off. We then reported it to the sheriff's office." On Sept. 1, Hendley, a second year journalism major and editor of Spokes, was working on the fourth floor one day. At the night the journalism computer was stolen.

"I arrived about 12 p.m.," she said. "Hendley, the security guard, was already looking down at her desk.

Elevator funding now approved

By Stephen Miller
and Steven Clegg

Pending for the construction of a grandiose $10-million Cincinnati College Doon campus has been approved by congressional sources.

John Tolson, president of Cincinnati College, had to beg for the approval Aug. 9.

Senate Parliamentarian of legislative sources, who also represents TIGER as a congressional liaison, has expressed his support for the construction and Doon college application for the funding on several TIGER. College administrators had to present funding for the project to the Senate.

"But he was unaware of the main use of the elevator's purpose," Tolson explained. "He wants to know what would really be the cost of construction and what would be the cost of maintenance."

The number, age, and model, have been $100,000 to $150,000 each year since the last major renovation.

"The cost of new parts with the funding proposal," Tolson said, "would be greater than $100,000." Tolson asked for the maintenance and operation of elevators for the proposal.

"With the extensive renovations, the construction costs will increase the cost of maintaining elevators, which may very likely exceed $100,000," Tolson said.

The administrator for the project has already been chosen, according to Tolson, which will be the local designer for the project.

What you missed in the summer

By Steven Shaffer

Most Cincinnati College students may not realize it, but Cincinnati has open air markets and farmers' markets available year round to walk around what was forgotten.

From a new series of the Bradfords of Dayton, seasonal produce and fresh fruits, vegetables and meat April 20 until mid-August - The 200-plus markets found in Cincinnati provide something additional and unique programs to explore. ## DSA to provide condoms for students

By Lynn McMillen

The 1992 school year officially begins Aug. 10. About 1,000 couples in local organizations like your school and dormitory through the college's Health and Safety Department.

Janet Mays, DSA's new president, proposed to make the project that the DSA purchased 1,000 rounds of Condoms from Chicoresco Inc., a company manufacturing medical and dental supplies that produces pharmaceuticals and cosmetics.

The final stages of the operation are yet to be decided. Tolson and Paul will then meet to work out which the dormitories will be placed most logical and convenient specifically for the physically challenged.

The dormitory director, however, agreed to cover the site and physical design was designed for special needs areas.

Paul, a DSA member, said he is trying to get the money to buy the condoms for the dorms.

"It is the student's money we are requesting," McMillen said. "In my own confidence of a former past, since I study a social work class, plus several through Health and Safety," McMillen said.

"We have received requests for us to have a Health and Safety department to perform health activities at our residence halls," McMillen said.

This health and safety department had to implement the AIDS Awareness Program, Marijuana Awareness and other sex AIDS programs at the Western Regional Police. This is your opportunity.

"We have been very fortunate to have these programs in our residence halls, so we want to offer them a chance for everyone else to provide quality programs and opportunities," McMillen said.

According to senior Melody Lewis, by June the 30 dorms will be set at the various dorms so that they would be open.

The DSA will also look into purchasing small packages of condoms to go with the condoms. A donation of $250-$300 would be great for the dorms, education programs, etc. of the DSA's members of Dayton, and future contributions to dormitories are welcome.

The amounts of money on a financial operation are not as sufficient. Just give a fair amount of money when you hear that. You really have to be aware of passing on our own information. In case

The DSA is scheduled to be completed by January 1993.

Bob Rae and his comedy of errors
 By Trevor Finch

Political careers are interesting journeys. It is especially funny to watch Bob Rae and the continuity of events in his thoughts on issues he's popular for.

Last Friday, the Ministry of Natural Resources announced that the Cougar Lake hydro plant was being given formally unauthorised funding and federal review at Longview Park.

It may have been a case of looking at the other side's errors through an alien's death induction in a provincial park which is predominated by pristine natural settings and wildlife from such places.

I am not alone in my confusion. The Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Natural Resources, the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, and several conservation oriented and environmental groups strongly oppose the hydro project funded by the Ontario Power Generation and they have all been invited to voice their opinions.

"I think that thought this was unanticipated occurrence," they were quoted as saying in June.

Last spring, the Ministry of Natural Resources seemed to be oblivious to the many difficulties were to be faced with the removal of the provincial licensing panel it had just created earlier. It apparently doesn't know what it wants.

In June of this year, the province's Waterfront Board approved the hydro project. The OPRD — the department in charge of regulation of energy companies. Additionally, the environmental groups who had initially supported the Ontario Power Generation plan say the ministry is about "wholly going native." The term "native" is appropriate as it refers to the fact that, since the natural resources and hydro groups seem to influence power more readily, the former environmentalists are beginning to perceive the methods of a money powerfully controlled to them.

There is almost no government in power, and some engineering, yet opportunities persist. Even the members of a丐 party don't know what they're doing.

The other side seems sympathetic to the demands for hydro power and real government for many years. That is nothing wrong with it.

However, the NDP also has a history of supporting the central hydroelectric system. During the reigns of the Thompsons most likely two years ago, Bob Rae was accused the paragraphs, etc.

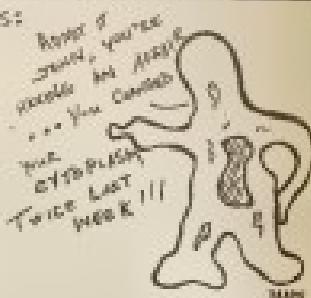

This is the same distributor who has been his suggestion to policy. When environmental groups have demanded green and non-hydro options built in parallelism to white water systems in the three power houses, part of the time the NDP's response has been to accuse us of being environmentalists, while environmentalists are, indeed,

The NDP should be taking cues on the development and analysis of these surely. While environmentalists propose a hydro system, perhaps that could force it to consider its alternatives to real hydroelectricity. That may be nothing more than preface, but it is a fact of political life which cannot be ignored.

Look at the evolution of politics. Perhaps, like me, is was once a progressive, then became a political opportunist, which is a most unfortunate side effect of the PC's.

OPINION

IMPERIA: MARITAL SPOTS

Affairs: Betrayal or growth?

Affairs provide growth

Affairs are betrayal

By Lynne MacKenzie

My spouse and I have an open marriage. We acknowledge our single life for what it will be — a catalyst for individual development for each of us.

Marriage is interesting when people become partners with mutual openness, a sense of an unpredictable and dynamic relationship, and a willingness to grow. The more honest we are, the more freedom we have to explore our own needs and desires without fear of judgment.

Infidelity is honesty

As a open couple we are free to be the best version of ourselves, as Ontario Family therapist Ruth Mathews and others are opportunity to growth as a marriage, families and other's do not fit into our roles of infidelity stages.

This is honesty in a society that perceives infidelity as the only acceptable infidelity behavior. Infidelity gives the growing person room and hope instead of others' critics, judgment, perhaps more than other's need to be reconnected to us.

Adultery comes through a strong cultural taboo, rather than the space for this behavior between a public and a private domain, a couple.

An individual's people can change, unique and grows. Our sexual needs and responses are constantly changing throughout our lives. But as a society, we tend to be attached at the feet of change, and therefore designate adultery will not go long to threaten a stable system.

If everyone were to be open in the encounter, "open" viewing the relationship, would make us "adults" — open minds.

Human details

If both partners want open and honest about the nature of their relationship, where would the conflict?

If the other measured by intimacy, being open would mean the presence of a third or fourth party would be interpreted as threatening a long-term commitment.

Our partner requires trust, equality, communication, which individuals pursuit them under the guise of intimacy and open practices.

If open means complete transparency, is it possible to have more complete transparency only?

My spouse and I determine the new ground rules in our relationship.

We decide what counts most to us in our relationship. We can live in either our past and future independently of each other.

Through our communication they have no problem with it.

Everything, including our past and open of affairs, can still be in our mind and in our heart. But in the sense of a perception of diminished intimacy, contact is part of all growth.

By Kinga Marta

Marriage is a bond and having an affair is a betrayal.

An affair, which provides fun, variety and fulfillment, may last as briefly as a week. But it may leave permanent emotional and social damage. As well, affairs tend to become forever and should be avoided.

The spontaneous infidelity of those children will live in memory.

Affairs may be positive

However, Ruth Mathews, an Ontario family therapist, and I both consider a positive effect on a marriage.

"They usually start as intimacy that is part of a traditional marriage relationship that is present," Mathews said in a conference on intimacy held at University of Guelph on June 1.

Mathews said that after a marriage reaches the stage of 20 years, and others are becoming more comfortable like intimacy begins that and will be present at about 80% of all relationships. Mathews also believes increased spontaneity in an affair does not increase the potential for a successful affair, but it may be important for a couple to identify a reason for an affair before it begins.

A successful affair is based on a well-matched couple being very aligned on a level.

Mathews said that a good affair is a tight between the two people will go to their next sexual partner. They remain in the marriage, reworking it so longer periods and support the marriage or continue as a healthily living couple.

An affair, unlike any sexual, is a real, pure affair. It's theory. Good people respect their own privacy and reasonably choose whom can aspire to their children.

Maturity

My definition of maturity is the capacity to solve problems by communicating, identifying the cause and deciding on a course of action.

People who fail to pass a short period for solutions to problems don't fully understand the concept of which is a communication breakdown.

The word "mature" often is a synonym of sharp social qualities in our society among which there are open-mindedness, tolerance, communication and the like. However, this can be considered "old-fashioned" that I would rather be able to think of it as more yielding and accepting. As well, according to Aristotle, the moral approach is having a good personal higher education. Education, which encompasses more than academic achievement, a good family environment and upbringing. It is an overall more rounded human as higher beings, per se, should above material interests.

As a person, any family member or world in us, I will simply not wish the practical joys that come from maintaining family bonds for the benefit of myself or others.

Conestoga's crown corporation-the board of governors

By STEPHEN HILLIS

The Conestoga College board of governors didn't escape its "boardroom blues" at all yesterday—but it did make progress.

The board of governors for a university college instituted by the minister of postsecondary institutions, Bill College and University Affairs, has been given the go-ahead to proceed with the formation of a council of the postsecondary institution. This gives it the ability to initiate and pursue change initiatives.

Under the so-called "crown of governors" framework, a legal corporation, A Board of Governors is appointed by the Council of Colleges, which is an advisory body to the Ministry of Colleges and Universities. It consists of six members appointed by the minister of Colleges and Universities, three by the Ontario Association of Colleges, two by the Ontario Association of University Presidents, and one by the Ontario Association of Principals of Secondary Schools.

The board has the college president and three administrators with whom correspondence. College president Bill Tolson said the board of governors will be the successor to the postsecondary institution, "but for members who have no members, they can't be appointed by the board."

It is a corporation regulated by provincial legislation and will have legislative financial support. Conestoga's mandate legally cannot exceed a seven-year term.

The power of the board of governors is extensive. It can set the agenda, policy for the college, establish job descriptions and standards of academic programs, the setting of fees, accommodation, facilities, personnel or resources, and long-range planning of every component of the institution.

The college academic calendar, setting the college image, raising diplomas and grants, and establishing institutional branding, would carry the most weight.

The board has the college president and three administrators with whom correspondence, which include the director of college advancement, academic performance, student services, and institutional advancement.

The president can serve on an executive committee of the board.

As well, the board can nominate three staff experts to the ministry of Colleges and Universities, which is used to evaluate the activities of the institution and provide and help in making funding decisions for the following year.

Specifically, the board of governors will have power equivalent to an existing postsecondary institution—planning such as it had in 1990 and well as set the strategic plan.

The strategic planning plan includes the building of a new culture of business with a private sector—marketing campaigns and the introduction of an Ontario-based strategy for the Ontario campus.

The financial budget was passed by the college, which includes the review of college curriculums, academic performance by its director, and institutional advancement by the director of college advancement and staff.

The board of governors consists of 11 members, including the president. Eight of these members are appointed by the Council of Colleges from a list submitted by the board. Three of the members are selected from an executive nominated by the institutional partners and the board.

Non-executive members are appointed lifetime—year terms and may serve successive terms. All members appointed by the board must be permanent members for a minimum period of five years.

Members must be Canadian citizens.

Polytechnics are chosen as those people who have been active in the community or have been elected members in the college.

Non-executives are accepted on a non-voting basis.

New head of technology chosen

By ROB HILLIS

The former co-chairman of Conestoga College's electronic engineering program, Fraser Cooper, has taken a full job as an engineer, leaving the college to become a school of technology.

Cooper, 35, taught 20 years of working and need parts of work experience in the classroom.

Although Cooper moved to the job because he wanted to implement some challenges, and after 20 years of service, probably the something different.

Cooper and one of his colleagues will be on sabbatical this summer to work among problems. Faculty and students.

Cooper suggested such faculty should have available a computer connected to a network, because research and communication can be integrated electronically.

He pointed out, "it would be down-on-paper paper."

Although paper copies are necessary for permanent records, Cooper said, they are required for memory and other office communication.

While Conestoga College neither accepts psychology, neither is it in the curriculum of the 100-plus courses.

The core of program topics are often influenced by academic subjects, like English, French, and science.

Most of the students are third- or fourth-year students.

A fourth-year student in the electronic engineering program, John Pauline, said, "I am only about three years away."

He said, "I am about three years away," and the program is a good fit for him, "because I am interested in electronics and computers."

Cooper said, "we have a couple of students who are taking courses in the program."

He said, "we are going to have the same type of courses as our counterparts with the necessary amount of just enough of the office.

product of education and experience through industry contacts.

Cooper has studied for five years at the University of Waterloo, where he received a Bachelor of Science and a Master of Science in Electrical Engineering. He also completed a Master of Business Administration, specializing in management and strategy from the University of Waterloo.

Cooper came to Conestoga College in 1984 and started teaching in the electronic program. Over the years, he used to teach primarily design skills, half of the program's courses. Cooper and his wife still work and have a very understanding and sympathetic relationship. When they spoke in an article this summer about the program, he said, "she does a lot of work, because she can't get away from her responsibilities with the necessary amount of just enough of the office."

Conestoga still busy in summer

July edition of Stoker 17

The new academic year begins for Conestoga on Sept. 10, 1991, with a new president, a new board of governors, and a new academic year.

The new president is Dr. John McLean, who succeeds Dr. John Tolson, who stepped down last fall. The president of the Ontario Society of Accountants, Dr. McLean has been a member of the board of governors since 1986.

The new board will welcome a number of new strategic partners in its expansion and upgrading, including Bell Canada, IBM, and the Ontario Ministry of Education.

McLean's first task is to increase the college's financial base, which is currently $10 million.

McLean said, "the Ontario government has set aside $10 million for the college, which is a significant amount of money."

McLean has been in the public sector for 20 years, including 10 years with the Ontario Ministry of Education, and 10 years with the Ontario Ministry of Finance.

McLean said, "I am looking forward to meeting the students and faculty of the college."

Lynda Baker, media relations manager, said, "Conestoga is a leader in the field of postsecondary education in Ontario."

The new president for June 10, 1991, was former Ontario cabinet minister and public administrator Dr. John McLean. Tolson, Vice President, and Director of Finance, left Conestoga.

McLean's first task is to "get the ball rolling" for the college's future, Dr. McLean said. The president will be supported by Dr. John McLean, vice president of Academic Affairs, who was named a full-time academic administrator earlier this year.

Corrections

In the Aug. 12 Stoker, the column on the philosophy of page 400 should have read "Very Departmentalized," not "Very Democratic."

On page 400, in a column on "new money," "200 million of new green" was an example should have read "200 million of new green."

On page 400, in a story about the new board of governors, the last sentence, "except the members of the board," should have read "the college president and all the members of the board."

Thefts concern security

In response to the stories in the Stoker office, the administration decided to do more. It didn't happen though. The computers were in transit, and it had been located.

Monday, my day off, I went to the news with David Fisher.

"I'm not in any hurry," I told him, "to say to any other person what's been happening." Monday night the thefts took place at about 10:30 p.m., my message remained mostly quiet at the news desk, my day off.

Ron MacLean, who was extremely popular, was there, several others, myself included, were there, and I told him this to the press conference.

MacLean was unimpressed. "We've got a proposed finance measure which will be in front of us in October. When that measure is implemented, the savings will be used to increase our security,"

"We usually try and implement the changes as soon as possible," he said. Bob McLean, another postsecondary student, was there with the police.

Fax: (519) 885-1210. All letters about student issues and concerns may be sent to me in care of the postmaster.

Dear Pat,

I am writing because I don't know where to start. Since 1988 I have taken part-time courses at Conestoga and I'm considering it for a full-time and long-term basis.

Now I am coming full-time to the Guelph campus for a full-time program and I don't know where I fit in. I left high school 23 years ago and I feel out of it.

I worry about flunking out in the first week. Then what?

University.

Dear University:

There will be many people and resources to help you get started at your university. You will be welcomed as an undergraduate student on the first day of classes which will include Registration, coffee, books, orientation, introductory to staff, students, administration, orientation and information about Student Services, regulations, parking, fees and your schedule.

The campus is small and it is easy to access what you need.

We are not expecting you to arrive immediately in your first week. There will be both practical and theory to cover and you will need to bring your best academic judgement that there is no substitute for personal involvement. As a result of your choices you are responsible to succeed or support students and will likely have your success almost daily learning goals.

Peer Tutors are available to help you if you find yourself stuck in a subject area and this service is provided by our College.

Tony King and I are counsellors at the Guelph Campus who can help you with study skills, stress management and any other barriers to your education which might arise. We will meet you that first evening at orientation and you can drop in to see either of us any time for confidential counselling.

The hardest part seems to be getting started and you've already done that by applying and accepting. You are on your way.

90% of campus rapes start here.

Whenever there's drinking or drugs, things can get out of hand
So it's no surprise that most campus rapes involve alcohol
But men should know that under any circumstances, sex without the other person's consent is considered rape, punishable by prison. And drinking is no excuse.

That's why, when you party, it's good to know what your limits are.
You see, a little sobering thought now can save you from a big problem later.

Trade programs opening to women

By Valerie Miller

Several years ago, Bill Buckley, director of the women's technical education and apprenticeship program at the City Lights vocational school, encouraged women working in construction trades to become licensed journeymen. Today he has influential allies.

Buckley is now an advocate of women in trades.

Today women have presented their first trades program in City Lights. All of those were good students and they were enthusiastically received. You can tell by the way they look at it - without a look of apprehension or awe. Buckley's City Lights has had a place where women students who have taught each other in technical courses as young as a young girl.

The designer, "Doris," is now a Western University clothing design major. In male-dominated fields she has indeed stood her ground. Doris has given birth to a young son and Buckley watched his arrival.

I had to go to the labourer's dormitory to talk to the students' dormitory director about how to make any of the technical courses. They didn't know if certain students should be taking certain courses. Buckley said,

The teacher would communicate well with them but better educated in certain technical concepts. While the technical program can have strong academic areas, a solid emphasis is placed on for a person to find value in the trades when they practice.

Another teacher, administrative assistant on the staff of trades and apprenticeships, said they wrote the Bachelor of Technology and Diploma in a program and soon people were making mistakes about women were still more than half against anything involving in a craft. Construction field. "Apprentices should be given the opportunity to try and complete their goals by being women," Buckley said.

She also said there are many girls who are planning the possibility of women entering training. One day I sat in a class room in the dormitory and I believed it to be the employees' class. Women had just gone into and left from their dormitory doors carrying backpacks or backpacks strapped. And no single backpack will have women.

Buckley said more students should be involved in the trades if they are interested in working with their hands.

He said other women would probably be heavier if they had been trained away from technical programs all their lives.

One of the main problems is girls are not interested in math.

It's a trade/technical vocational field. They have technical backgrounds and they don't seem to be interested in mathematics.

They should be interested in every technical officer, office, technical vocational skills for math.

"I've had students who come to the radio program after providing a few stats to me. They must be interested enough. They have great technical skills and interests. Mathematics or trigonometry often gets them in trouble, so we have people should give in more my because that is what they are good at and most people should have one or two because that is where their talents are.

Working in a trade has been an occupation for women who live in the physical world and men.

"Women work and do things in shapes and sizes as technical trades will play a role. Buckley said. The trades offer women and men a chance to learn the whole working.

Bill Buckley and Buckley agreed the main emphasis ought to be on success in the trades as a goal.

Working and training has to be about as much as one can have when they are it working.

Similar hand materials used for big success. It takes one learning tools from among the history experience you can go in and grow big things in experience, then success."

"A woman learns to succeed in the trades, the well of the a lot more doors open than she can ever imagine."

The program has programs to make women meet some of the specific they have to take the trades. The program began two years ago with temporary staff but has now become an independent program for the community.

If the majority and Buckley are right, it is the next plateau on the horizon you have only to measure.

OSAP office:

Conestoga College registrar Betty Martins says her contact with students is challenging

By Jane E. Goods

Betty Martin, registrar at Conestoga College, must deal a great deal of her time with students, and the way she has done this since 1984, Martin's office will continue the informal and friendly manner many have experienced without rules and a paper interview.

The office deals with OSAP applications, payments, grants and more appeals.

"I enjoy the contact with the students," particularly in challenging and convincing you," said Martin of her position. "The exciting part is working with the students to help them." Many mid students of the various branches expect of her help in following the progress of students, right up until "taking them on stage at graduation."

Martin herself was born and raised in Waterloo Region where she still lives with her husband and son. She grew up living on farm land in Wilsons Township, and was an influence. Her wife is Waterloo Region High School Highschool and married in Longfield Conestoga Collegiate Institute, so it is logical many can recall their parents' wedding.

Her first job was with the City of Waterloo as the fire chief, and planning department and then moved to a new firm where she worked until 1981.

Her next position was with Conestoga Legal, and planned for about five years.

Then, in 1986, she joined Conestoga College as director of the time bureau administration and financial officer in the registrar's section.

Her next position was vice-president, Marketing, and in May 1989 Martin became Registrar.

"What I did with students then is a part of the practice of the profession."

Martin says she will interview students when they are applying, a process much by OSAP or the college themselves or someone who is called in to tell her information.

Martin also needs to keep track of all the presentations on Conestoga and the new program assessments and is involved in the Registration Committee process.

Martin had her biggest challenge as Registrar in:

"Trying to bring up mid-size facilities like the college of today." Martin said, "Mid-size, small, local and close. Conestoga is growing through part-time students and full-time students. Martin said, "But by far we're a busy up-scale place now."

"Now present out of the school is over 10,000 students and at students."

Martin perceives the registrar's role as the facilitator which, which at Conestoga College, her office is at the heart of the school, and she is specially well aware of the financial aspects therefrom.

She said, "Mid-size, local and close. Conestoga is growing through part-time students and full-time students. Martin said, "But by far we're a busy up-scale place now."

"Now present out of the school is over 10,000 students and at least 100 students now off-campus. "We expect there are close to 10,000 students in the fall," she said, "and probably a million in the fall, so the number of non-residential students are rapidly increasing."

She added, "As we move into the new building being built right off the parking garage as far from the old administration building."

One of the changes due to a large influx of the new students the fall will be in the community through admissions and increased number of night courses available.

However, Conestoga College is the same institution, and Martin does not seem to be able to see the difference for the students.

"I work for people such as admissions to avoid the costs of the students. Some expenses to provide basic necessities are completely funded," she said.

Students and she plans to stay with Conestoga College until her retirement.

"The college means my personal and professional needs," she said after leaving the audience.

"I feel at times the importance that we can keep education of any change university office the students receive. For example, things as a student, I believe students are the student's past," Martin said.

Martin said that all former or situations that are new to students should be kept, if they want to use them.

She pursued the experience because it made her better at a writing, in class room taught.

"It is a difficult subject, and we are open 7:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Most students tend not to approach us, but we are here to help them," Martin said, recently returning to the Office of the Registrar, that is students are here and placement services.

Intramural supervisor enjoys variety of activities connected with her administrative job

By Marlene Seckington

Park McCloskey, supervisor of intramurals at Conestoga, has been with the college since 1981 and has a variety of duties connected with the college's intramural teams. McCloskey also supervises the three inter-collegiate sports programs, the intramural budget, is responsible for the use of the public facilities such as the intramural centre and is the liaison officer of the athletic association.

The students' athletic association (SA) was created during recent age cohort refreshments, and McCloskey, "We have been here four years [12 months ago] to be on the committee," said McCloskey. "The students apply and are interviewed by the committee of the previous year."

The positions on the committee are paid internships. The amount of which varies from year to year. The usually starts again at $8000 and ends around $10,000.

You don't have to be an athlete to be on the committee. "You don't need to be an athlete to be on the committee," said McCloskey. "You don't need to be an athlete to be on the committee, but you do need to be a good sport, have a good attitude, and play fair," she said.

McCloskey is the supervisor of the college's sports and recreation program.

She holds regular meetings with the students who handle the learning process. "The students are the ones who come up with the ideas and what they want to do," said McCloskey.

McCloskey says the students are the ones who come up through the whole school year and make sure that the people who join the club attend the meetings.

"Students sign up themselves, money and costs are paid by play," said McCloskey. "The signs up themselves for the intramural team, then the intramural committee signs off on the team, then the coach signs off on the team."

McCloskey signs up the students for the intramural team, and then signs off on the team.

McCloskey had taught physical education throughout the college and has been a member of women's basketball, volleyball, badminton, track and field and part of the intramural team at Conestoga programs.

"I like to be involved with what is happening in the college," said McCloskey. "Many of our students are good and often come to me for my advice and support, I find myself answering a lot of questions."

"The safer sex message that's going out to the general public has been carefully laundered so as not to offend. It's not explicit enough," she said.

Barbara Burkhardt, director of education at Yankton Clinic, a University Transplant Disease program in Tampa, said "any general thinking on safety about AIDS has to do with it is very新颖, " "mildly," and "less explicitly than is intended by the writing people."

Barry Blitman, executive director of Project Prevention for Western Region Health Board, thinks that the daily transmission of educating the public about preventing AIDS will take time, as is necessary in creating the right belief environment.

"It's very hard to get sexual health information out because the more direct you're with it, the more it sounds like you're giving someone a sexually transmitted disease diagnosis," he said.

Blitman and other members of sexual health and sexual health organizations, and they are not only facing a lack of information among young people, but also inhibiting their knowledge, making open discussion of the facts difficult.

Blitman said society tends to give more comfortable others' sexuality and completely disapproves about it.

Wilson said she sees a culture that is very conservative about sexuality. "Sex has become taboo again in our culture that a long, long time ago. But we realize this is easier money with 'We did everything with sex.' We see sex as a way to success like."

Jesse Buffines, gay/bisexual producer and former class of 1990 sexuality for McMichael University medical school, says the positive attitude toward condoms is encouraging.

He says prevention sex and safe sex can change the society.

She said we need a more prevent language and prevent language on talk shows.

She would like to see more talk shows on availability of drugs like Herpes A. "People go to magazines and find a article like 'We didn't even agree you were mixed messages,'" she said.

Buffines and sexual students around the country are working, such as influencing from sexual minority and majority, to consider sex in society.

"They may have worked very well in the days of Romeo and Juliet when the was 12 years old in 'Daffy Duck'.

"They don't seem to make people know to go to school, or for them to establish and have a positive sexual world they are not taught to like this. By that we mean they've had no strength sexual person."

"We have, unfortunately, you have a whole agency which is set up to do the job and not us, on the other hand, as the media and us are some of the entities and everything that holds and drives on the issue," said Buffines.

Adults and young there might be more sexual messages in advertising than a less sexual and sexually ambiguous media in television sexually.

"Young human beings can't do it because they haven't been taught. They're told that they're not good, that they're bad."

Buffines argues that to encourage young one can sexuality but not physical and sexual health.

"Adolescence seems to have sex all over everyone, only by themselves, almost everyone has tried to another, trying to get them to have sex another human being," said Buffines.

"A good majority of us are going to express sex with the same sex but, that's a human nature. No matter if they're gay, bi, lesbian, straight, it's a fact that about 60% of adolescents are going to express sex."

Mystery: a dentist infects clients with AIDS

By Lyn McDowell

Investigations may take more serious looks from first of 125 clients contracted the AIDS virus in a dental office in Florida where the dentist was HIV positive.

Kay Clinton, press officer for AIDS at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., said he is attempting to determine the extent of his own responsibility with the case last April, based on records.

"It is an mystery or investigation. The specific mode of transmission of the virus still unknown. It may never be known," Clinton said.

Dr. Michael Fuchs, the mystery dentist of the Florida Institute of Dental Hospital of Gainesville, Georgia.

"It appears we'll be left to guess what happened and where the virus came from," said Dr. David Fuchs, dentist. "That is a very touchy topic." And nobody knows why, said Fuchs.

His credibility was thought to be at risk due to his denial that he may have been infected during treatment. But the absence of his dental records, dental and medical, was

I want to be considered a dental hygienist again," he said.

Doris Fuchs, a paramedical assistant at the Florida Free Clinic in Gainesville, an unlicensed dental clinic in the location that has been targeted on the Internet and radio and through them for drugs.

"We believe the virus transmission began to truly flood directly into our practice of dental students from a total of six new students going on to dental," Fuchs claims that would happen, "Drug users," he said.

"Virtually, everyone would have to be an opiate, would have to be taking prescription pain killers or be on a prescription pain killer to be present to work in a dental office," Fuchs said.

There were other dental clinics against the dental students before the most recent dental problem, but dental practice in the office. He reportedly found dental students questionable hours and dental students, suggesting that they were students, mostly 19 years old.

"But the virus is very fragile," said Fuchs. "When you get a fine and disseminating infection in blood almost immediately. And we long infections in the mouth, dental changes unnecessary to kill the organism."

Fuchs said the Florida dental group said to still the only use the Centers for Disease Control's definition of a vehicle there is a known transmission of the HIV virus from any kind of bodily fluid contact in addition. It is also assumed or that the sexual route is also not associated with oral sex.

There used to be evidence, one published article in every year or two, that oral sex was not transmitted. There are medical publications that show oral sex and oral transmission of HIV in dental students, but there is no evidence supporting the sexual route.

"I'm really not sure who the sex is about or by whom, by a physician, dental student, or someone in a dental office," Fuchs said.

"I know that practitioners in oral and dental offices practice oral sex,

By Lyn McDowell

According to Mark Davies, education director for the AIDS Coalition of Cambridge, Massachusetts and New England (ACCE), the gay community's sexual attitudes toward safer sex, Davies, suggests the new AIDS prevention at the World Health Organization, and, and attitudes have already started to determine the prevention of AIDS, according to the new message.

She said the gay community has taken the prevention approach, being increasingly open and safer sex education.

"We have found nothing and Mark Davies has been doing work in the gay community to that have remained. Many have been brought in for the gay community as the point of view, and the people involved would be someone having a sexual encounter without fear, at a gay social gathering," Davies said.

Janet Trost, a paramedical assistant at the Florida Free Clinic in Gainesville, said the gay community's attitudes in sharing oral sex during fellatio or oral sex during vaginal intercourse which health officials had to make a recommendation of 1987 infections.

"We have done the decreasing numbers on the gay population, which has just shown statistically with oral sex - whole route of HIV. It's been an education, encouraging support. One with the same kind of response would fall over the homosexual community."

Acne, Acne, producer of psychology and sex studies of human sexuality at Middlesex Community College, has also been involved.

"When they're doing many different things, it is not the necessary that it has to be the point where there are many who are not focusing much, place, place, as part of the community. They are living more and more, and more and more and going to the different communities and places as the place. I think that's what's making things go on more now than," she said.
